UNIVERSITY
OF TURKU

African Research and Education Day

📍 13 November, Turku, Finland

In the upcoming decades, Africa will become an influential player in the international scene. How should our higher education address this change? What kind of sustainable educational co-operation we should have with our African partners? How our university education should address the current development in Africa? How to raise awareness about Africa and interest among students and young researchers in Finland in different fields? These are some of the topics the experts are discussing in the seminar.

We are also looking for active participation in the forms of posters, electric posters as well and participation in the discussions and networking!

The event takes place live in Turku, Finland and is organized by the University of Turku which is the coordinator of the FAPI network. All interested HE institutes, researchers and stakeholders are welcome to participate.

Prior registration is needed by October 25, 2024.
